things you can do for

Transgender Day of Visibility

1
Host a Transgender Day of Visibility casual gathering at a local coffee shop or restaurant.

2
Read a trans-focused book. Bring it with you and read it throughout the day. Let other people see what you are reading.

3
Write your political representative to share that you/someone you love is trans & what they can do to make sure trans people are protected in legislation.

4
If your workplace, school, or favorite hangout doesn't have an all-gender bathroom, suggest they add or convert one.

5
Have a conversation with a family member about trans issues.

6
Write a thank you letter to a company that has trans-inclusive employment policies.

7
Volunteer your time at a trans-focused organization. Let them know that you want to contribute because of TDOV.

8
Spend an hour online looking up trans history and people. Learn something new about the trans/gender non-binary community(ies).

9
Highlight non-binary pronouns and realities by respectfully referring to all people with the pronouns they/them /theirs.

10
Bring up trans issues with a colleague at work.

11
Call or connect with a trans or non-binary person in your life to tell you how much you value them.

12
Bake cookies and bring them to a trans-focused event. (Or bring them to your office or school and let them know what the occasion is.)
